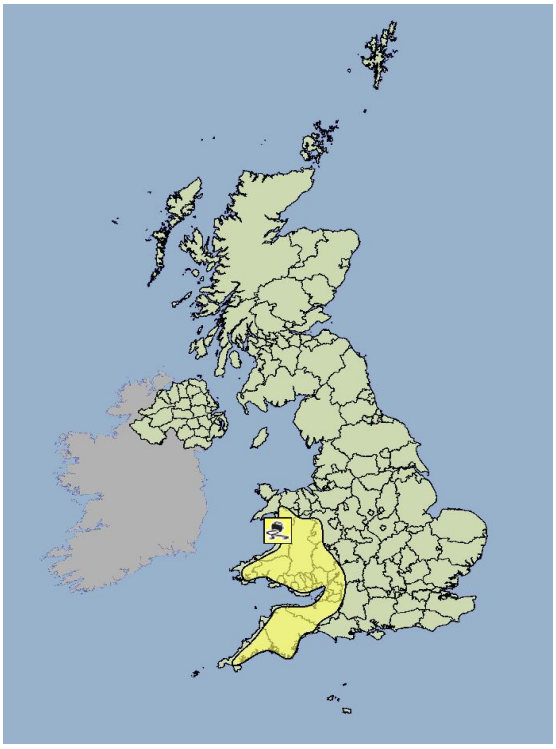
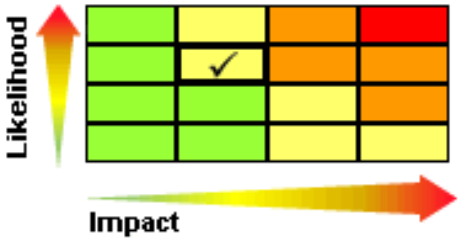
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Rain, with some hill snow in Wales, will clear during Friday evening, although some showers will follow into areas exposed to the west. Under clearer skies, ground temperatures are expected to fall below freezing overnight, initially over high ground, but more widely later in the night. Where roads and pavements are left wet, there is a risk of ice, particularly on untreated surfaces.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 01:00 on Sat, 04th Feb 2017 until 10:00 on Sat, 04th Feb 2017

Patches of ice are expected to form in some places overnight and at first on Saturday morning, which may lead to difficult driving conditions on untreated roads and slippery conditions on pavements.
